Seltrac. The way forward on the D.

Your guide to the new train control system on the Stratford to Canary Wharf route.

i on the D

Seltrac, our new train control system, has been introduced on the Stratford – Canary Wharf route. This highly sophisticated system – one of the most advanced in the world – has already proved successful on the Beckton-Poplar route.

This system has been extensively tested prior to introduction – nevertheless, we may experience some teething problems, so we do ask for your patience.

This summer the new Seltrac system will be extended to the whole railway and will allow us to introduce weekend services and more frequent weekday services.

You will notice a new safety feature appearing on platforms in the form of emergency train stop buttons.

At three of our stations – Canary Wharf, West India Quay and Poplar – some platform changes will apply.

Details are shown below and also at the relevant stations.

Canary Wharf.

Platforms 1&2	Trains for Stratford* (To connect to a Bank/Tower Gateway train use stairs or escalators to cross to platforms 5&6.)
Platforms 3&4	Trains for Island Gardens/Crossharbour.
Platforms 5&6	Trains for Bank/Tower Gateway. (To connect to a Stratford train use stairs or escalators to cross to platforms 1&2.)

* Stratford route trains are scheduled to depart within one minute of arrival at Canary Wharf.

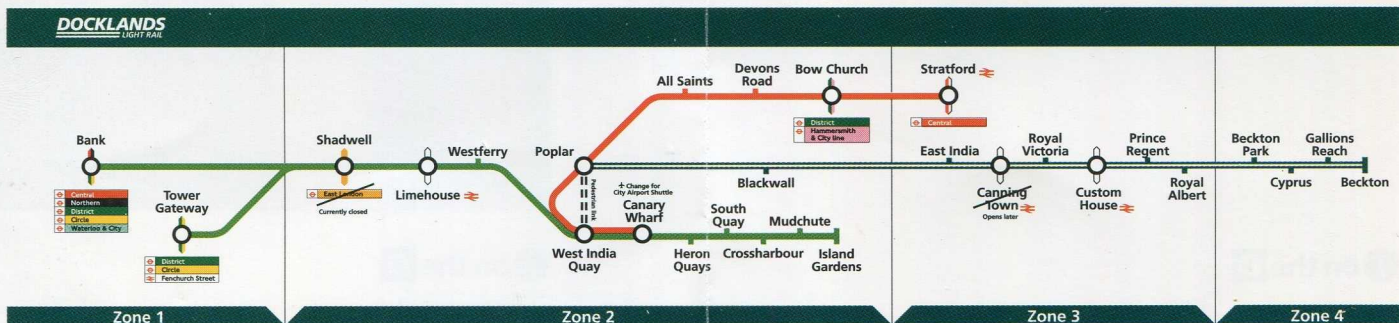

West India Quay.

Platform 1	Trains for Stratford and Canary Wharf (both directions).
Platform 2	Trains for Canary Wharf and Island Gardens/Crossharbour (no change).
Platform 3	Trains for Bank/Tower Gateway (no change).

Poplar.

Platforms 1&2	Not normally in use.
Platform 3	Trains for Stratford and Canary Wharf (both directions).
Platform 4	Trains for Beckton (no change).

The new dot matrix Passenger Information Displays will show train destinations and estimated waiting times. Service frequencies remain generally unchanged.

DLR would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your support and to assure you of our commitment to continued improvements in Customer Services.
